

Niche Ecommerce Opportunity Report

Finding the next golfweights.co.uk · Three research rounds, around 45 product angles, 25+ live SERP checks · August 2026

The 30-second version

We looked for products that behave like golf club weights: a small, high-intent search market, a deep brand-and-model catalogue, weak competition, low shipping cost, and buyers with money. We tested around 45 angles against Ahrefs data and live Google UK results. Nearly every plausible niche already has established specialists, including some surprisingly small ones. Three ideas survived.

#	Opportunity	Why it survived	Realistic size (see deep dives)
1	Printed & branded sports matting (jigsaw mats with club logos, judo/MMA mats, boxing ring canvases, platform inlays)	Google has no specialist to show for these searches, so it serves companies that print entrance doormats instead. Tickets run £2k to £15k, sales are quote-led, and a supplier does the manufacturing.	£10k to £50k/mo revenue at 2 to 6 jobs/mo. UK commercial gym and club matting spend estimated at £25m to £50m/yr.
2	Hot tub & spa filters (by brand / model / filter code)	Over 1,500 measured searches a month at near-zero keyword difficulty, and no dedicated specialist. The current results are hot tub dealers' afterthought pages. Filters are a consumable: owners buy 2 to 6 a year.	£1.5k to £3.5k/mo in year 1, £3k to £8k/mo in year 2 as the repeat base builds. UK filter market estimated at £10m to £40m/yr.
3	Caravan & motorhome locker keys, catches & hinges (by model / key code)	The structure looks right (key-code long tail, distress purchases, letter-post shipping) but it has not been validated yet. It is cheap to check before anyone commits.	Around 1.3m UK caravans, motorhomes and statics. Size it after a two-day validation pass.

If you only remember one thing

Genuinely empty niches are now rare. The most reliable signal we found is the mis-served search: Google returns the wrong product because the right shop does not exist. Search 'gym mats with logo' and you get doormat printers. 'Golf club weights' looked the same way before golfweights.co.uk launched. The final section sets out a repeatable method for finding more of these.

Everything else failed the live competition check, including some angles with attractive demand: garage door spares at around 7,000 searches a month, greenhouse spares, and made-to-measure netting at over 15,000. The Graveyard section documents each one so nobody re-treads them.

What 'working' actually looks like

Before sizing anything, we benchmarked the two businesses we know work:

Site	GB keywords	...in top 3	Organic visits/mo	Ahrefs traffic value	Reported reality
lifebuoysdirect.co.uk	99	52	~1,786	~$1,960/mo	Tens of £k/month revenue (anecdotal, via Joe)
golfweights.co.uk	104	17	~399	~$63/mo	A viable, healthy niche business

Three lessons come out of this table:

- 1. The bar is low. A business turning over tens of thousands a month ranks for 99 keywords. What matters is owning a small set of high-intent searches outright: 52 of lifebuoys' 99 keywords sit in the top 3.
- 2. Revenue per visit is very high when intent is pure. If lifebuoys does £20k to £30k a month on roughly 1,800 visits, that works out at £11 to £17 per visit. Ordinary ecommerce sees £1 to £3. This is why a 200-search-a-month niche can support a real business, and why our sizing works from revenue per visit rather than traffic projections.
- 3. The face-value keyword understates the market. golfweights ranks for 104 terms built from perhaps a dozen head terms; the brand and model catalogue generates the rest. Each deep dive below therefore shows the face-value terms and the long tail.

The scarcity finding

Across three rounds we ran more than 25 live Google UK checks rather than relying on cached SEO-tool data, which flattered several niches. Only two of the checked SERPs were genuinely open or mis-served. Niches you would expect to be empty turn out to be crowded: horse arena mirrors, at 150 searches a month, has six dedicated specialist sites. Garage door spares has ten. The period when you could pick any boring product and be first online has largely passed. What remains falls into three groups: mis-served intents, categories too new to have specialists yet, and execution plays against incumbents who are real but beatable.

So what?

The three survivors earned their place against an exhaustive search, so they deserve serious attention. The Graveyard is worth keeping too: it records what not to spend a year on, with evidence attached.

The full scoreboard: 45 angles, one line each

Verdicts: PURSUE · VALIDATE / WATCH · OCCUPIED / KILLED. 'Live' means checked against live Google UK results rather than cached tool data.

Angle	GB demand (denoised)	Verdict	One-liner
Printed/branded sports matting	~1,300/mo funnel	PURSUE	Mis-served search: Google substitutes doormats. Tickets £2k to £15k. See Deep dive 1.
Hot tub filters by model/code	~1,500/mo + tail	PURSUE	No specialist, consumable revenue, keyword difficulty near zero. See Deep dive 2.
Caravan locker keys/catches by code	not yet pulled	VALIDATE	Looks right on paper. Needs a two-day check before we trust it. See Deep dive 3.
Headphone ear pads/cables by model	~160/mo + big tail	SIDE-BET	The best pure catalogue clone. Competitive, but beatable on execution. See Deep dive 4.
Robot mower blades	~90/mo (growing)	WATCH	The installed base grows every year. Revisit each spring.
Padel/pickleball consumables layer	nascent	WATCH	Courts and canopies are colonised (8 specialists). Accessories are not, but demand is still tiny.
E-scooter/e-bike mechanical spares	unvalidated	VALIDATE	Consumable wear parts with a model matrix. Needs its own live pass.
Drone propellers by model	~280/mo	SIDE-BET	Model terms at zero difficulty, but DJI and Amazon cap the ceiling.
Ifor Williams trailer parts	700/mo KDO	POSSIBLE	Weak dealer SERP. Freight costs mean it only works with a dealer partner fulfilling.
Golf trolley spares & batteries	~460/mo	POSSIBLE	A dated specialist at position 7 could be displaced. Battery logistics drag on the economics.
Trampoline spares by brand/size	unvalidated	VALIDATE	Weather-driven repeat purchases. Bulky. Check in spring.

Occupied or killed (full evidence in the Graveyard section):

Angle	GB demand (denoised)	Verdict	One-liner
Garage door spares (Henderson/Garador/Cardale)	~7,000/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Attractive demand, but ten spares-branded specialists on page 1.
Greenhouse spares by maker/model	~3,000/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	greenhousespares.co.uk at number 1, plus OEM parts shops and retailers.
Made-to-measure netting (all uses)	15,000+/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Huck, Henry Cows, nets4you and Net World Sports cover both the consumer and bespoke levels.
V-belts / taper-lock by code (Calda Morley play)	~2,500/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Six or more formalised distributors. The bearings category moved online years ago.
Cricket ground equipment (covers, screens)	~2,000/mo real	OCCUPIED (live)	Five or more ground-equipment firms. The $4.50 CPCs show the value, which they capture.
Blind spare parts	~700/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Three sites named 'blind spares' or 'blind parts' on page 1 (Joe's own check).
Derailleur hangers	1,500/mo GB	OCCUPIED	rearmechhanger.com already occupies the specialist position, holding 1 and 2.
Stove glass / rope / bricks	~950/mo	OCCUPIED	Five cut-to-size specialists.
uPVC door & window hardware	40,000+/mo	OCCUPIED	Screwfix, Toolstation and the ironmongery giants. Buying habits are set.
Toilet seat hinges by model	~2,500/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	A specialist plus Toolstation, Wickes and Amazon. The softest of the occupied set, but no real gap.
Sofa/furniture legs	~5,100/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Two specialists plus IKEA and Amazon.

Angle	GB demand (denoised)	Verdict	One-liner
Garden furniture cushions (MTM)	~2,500/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Foam converters already sell custom direct (foam4u, Direct Foam and others).
Hot tub covers (MTM)	~1,300/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Dealers, coversfortubs and The Cover Guy all offer custom-made.
Horse arena mirrors & equipment	150/mo	OCCUPIED (live)	Six specialists chasing 150 searches a month.
Changing room benches	600/mo KDO	OCCUPIED (live)	Workplace catalogue giants (AJ Products, Slingsby, BiGDUG).
Pizza oven accessories (Ooni/Gozney)	~10,000/mo	OCCUPIED	Ooni and Gozney sell direct and Amazon covers the rest. Tables are furniture freight.
Static caravan spares	~800/mo	KILLED	Demand too thin and fragmented. The head terms are already contested (KD 38).
Commercial gym equipment spares	~270/mo real	KILLED	The apparent demand was for machine purchases rather than spare parts.
Watch straps / coffee-machine parts / chainsaw chains / guitar parts / appliance & mower spares / fishing spools / airgun / kayak / sash & heritage iron	various	OCCUPIED	Formalised specialists, Amazon ownership, or no measurable Google demand. Detail in the workbook.

Deep dive 1: Hot tub & spa filters

The certainty play. Every hot tub consumes filters, typically 2 to 6 a year, and nobody in the UK has built a dedicated filter site. The current search results are hot tub dealers listing filters as a sideline.

Face-value demand (Ahrefs GB, 12-month averages)

Term	Vol/mo	KD	CPC	Note
hot tub filters	1,100	0	$0.35	Head term. The US equivalent does 1,300/mo at $0.60.
lay z spa filters	350	0	$0.25	The biggest inflatable brand's own term
intex hot tub filters	30	0	$0.25	Second inflatable brand
Model/code long tail	est. 2,000 to 4,000	≈0	n/a	'pww50', 'c-4326', 'mspa filters' and other per-model codes. This is the catalogue layer.

The long tail

Filters are indexed by industry codes (Pleatco, UniceL and Darlly cross-references) and by tub brand and model. That supports a catalogue of 300 to 800 pages where each page answers one exact search, the same structure as golfweights' putter-model pages. US data confirms the tail: the number 1 US page has a traffic potential of 1,400 visits a month, several times its head term.

Competition (live Google UK unless noted)

Who	What they are	Weakness
Happy Hot Tubs, Outdoor Living, Wave Spas, Castle, HotSpring	Hot tub dealers with filter category pages	Filters are a sideline. No code cross-reference tools, no model finder, thin content.
Amazon / eBay	Listings for branded codes	No fitment guidance, so buyers worry about ordering the wrong part. A specialist converts on that anxiety.
Bestway/Lay-Z-Spa direct	OEM consumables for their own tubs	Covers their own tubs only, and frequently out of stock in season.

Market sizing. Assumptions are shown so they can be challenged.

Layer	Estimate	Basis
UK installed base	~400k to 700k active tubs	BISHTA industry estimates of ~200k rigid tubs, plus the inflatable boom (Lay-Z-Spa claims over 1m UK units sold cumulatively; assume 30% to 50% active). Treat as an estimate band.
UK filter spend	£10m to £40m/yr retail	Installed base multiplied by £20 to £60 filter spend per active tub per year
Search-led slice at dominance	1,200 to 2,000 visits/mo	3,500 to 5,500 addressable searches/mo (measured core of 1,480 plus estimated tail) at 30% to 40% capture with top-3 rankings
Year-1 revenue	£1.5k to £3.5k/mo	Visits at 3% to 5% conversion and £35 average order (multipacks)
Year-2+ revenue	£3k to £8k/mo	Repeat purchases: a 1,000-customer base re-ordering 2 to 4 times a year compounds independently of Google

All sizing uses ranges. The installed-base figures are industry estimates rather than audited numbers. Demand is seasonal (peaking May to August), which 12-month averages hide.

Risks, and what would make us walk away

Bestway locking its ecosystem with proprietary filter shapes. An Amazon price war on the top ten codes. Buyers defaulting to Amazon out of habit. Walk away if a fresh live check shows a dedicated filter specialist has launched, or if supplier quotes push landed cost above roughly 40% of Amazon retail.

Next step

One week of work: confirm the SERP is still specialist-free, get quotes from two Chinese filter converters and one UK pool-trade wholesaler, build the code cross-reference dataset from the public Pleatco and Darly charts, then soft-launch 50 SKUs on a fitment-finder site.

Deep dive 2: Printed & branded sports matting

The ceiling play, and Joe's own tip. It survived every test we ran. Gyms, martial arts clubs, boxing clubs and schools pay £2k to £15k for matting printed with their identity. No UK specialist exists. Ask Google for 'gym mats with logo' and it serves companies that print entrance doormats.

Face-value demand (Ahrefs GB, 12-month averages)

commercial gym flooring	500	0	$1.40	The funnel head term. Fit-out buyers start here.
custom / branded / personalised yoga mats	~460 combined	0	$0.35 to 0.80	Print-on-mat demand that already exists
weightlifting platform	250	0	$0.60	Adjacent demand for logo inlays boxing ring canvas	150	0	$0.25	Printable canvas. Fight nights want sponsor branding.
custom wrestling mats / branded gym flooring	0	n/a	n/a	Zero volume. Nobody searches for a product nobody sells.

The long tail

The direct terms are empty because the category has no UK shopfront, so demand has to be built as well as captured. The plan is to rank for the generic funnel terms, establish the category with content and PR, and convert visitors to quotes. One caveat, flagged honestly: Ahrefs' custom gym flooring long tail contains AI-generated noise (for example 'custom brass gym flooring'), which we stripped before sizing.

Competition (live Google UK unless noted)

Who	What they are	Weakness
First Mats, UK Mats Direct, Slip-Not	Entrance doormat logo printers	The wrong product entirely. Their page-1 presence shows Google has nothing better to serve.
Gym Revolution, Mirafit, gym-flooring.com	Generic gym flooring retailers	No print capability and no custom quote offer epicmats.co.uk	Jigsaw mats including a logo category	The nearest thing. Thin content, with no sign of investment in the intent.
Enhance Mats (US)	US facility-branding specialist	Shows the model works commercially in the US, and has no UK presence.

Market sizing. Assumptions are shown so they can be challenged.

Layer	Estimate	Basis
UK facility universe	~7,500 gyms, ~5,000 martial-arts/boxing/CrossFit clubs, plus schools, MOD, police and universities	ukactive/LDC gym counts (2024) and club directories. Estimate band.
UK commercial matting/flooring spend	£25m to £50m/yr	Facilities multiplied by a 5-to-10-year refit cycle at £3k to £25k per fit-out. The branded slice is small today because nobody sells it.
Quote-led revenue at a modest win rate	£10k to £50k/mo	2 to 6 jobs a month at £3k to £12k average job, with 30% to 45% gross margin on supply and print
Search cost benchmark	$1.40 to $3.00 CPC	What fit-out buyers' clicks already trade for. Evidence of transaction value.

There is no consumable base here. Revenue is project-based, with repeat business from expansions, rebrands and club merchandise re-orders. Sales cycles run to weeks.

Risks, and what would make us walk away

This is quote-led B2B and needs sales follow-through as well as rankings. The print and supply partner is effectively the product. A US player such as Enhance, or a large flooring firm, could enter. Walk away if three supplier conversations cannot produce a reliable print-on-mat route at under 50% of retail, or if test outreach to 20 clubs yields no quote interest.

Next step

Two weeks: map UK mat importers and the large-format printers who already print on EVA, vinyl and canvas for the events trade. Build one landing page with portfolio mock-ups. Run a rank-and-outreach test against the 'commercial gym flooring' cluster. The agency's skillset covers every part of this build.

Deep dive 3: Caravan & motorhome locker hardware (by model / key code)

Included with its homework deliberately unfinished, so we validate before anyone gets attached. Locker keys by code ('FW450'), plus catches, hinges and vents by van model. Distress purchases, letter-post shipping, enthusiast owners.

Face-value demand (Ahrefs GB, 12-month averages)

Term	Vol/mo	KD	CPC	Note
(cluster not yet pulled)	n/a	n/a	n/a	Rounds 1 and 2 prioritised other validations. This survived on pattern strength.
Audience proxies	n/a	n/a	n/a	'ifor williams parts' (700/mo, KD 0) and caravan-adjacent pulls show this vertical searches for parts by brand.

The long tail

The expected structure: key codes (moulded into the lock face, so owners search the code verbatim), catch and hinge model numbers (Hartal, Dometic, Thetford, W4), and van-model fitment terms. If the pattern holds, that is hundreds of exact-match pages. If a matching-terms pull shows nothing, the idea dies cheaply.

Competition (live Google UK unless noted)

Who	What they are	Weakness
eBay sellers	Churn listings for keys and catches	No fitment authority, no key-code index, no next-day promise
Leisure generalists (e.g. Leisureshopdirect)	Broad caravan accessory catalogues	Parts are buried and there is no code-first UX. Note these are competent businesses; a live check is required.
OEM/dealer parts counters	Trade-oriented	Slow, phone-first, invisible to Google

Market sizing. Assumptions are shown so they can be challenged.

Layer	Estimate	Basis
UK audience	~555k touring caravans, ~400k motorhomes, ~365k holiday statics	NCC industry figures. Estimate band.
Demand	UNKNOWN until validated	A two-day pass: matching-terms on key codes and brand terms, then live SERP counts
Ticket/economics	£8 to £40 items, letter-post	Key blanks and catches are commodity imports. The margin structure resembles golf weights.

We are not sizing revenue until the keyword pull is done. Every other angle in this report was held to that standard.

Risks, and what would make us walk away

The main risk is that leisure generalists already own every code term, which is what happened with greenhouse spares. Some codes raise key-cutting and security sensitivities. Walk away if the code long tail totals under 500 searches a month, or if a competent code-first specialist shows up in the live check.

Next step

Two days and about 5,000 Ahrefs units: pull the key-code and catch-model long tail, live-check five SERPs, then either promote it to the pursue list or add it to the graveyard with evidence.

Deep dive 4: Headphone ear pads, cables & headbands (side-bet)

Structurally the closest match to golf weights on the list. It stays as a low-capital side bet, with the competition stated honestly. Round 1 overrated it; Joe called that, and the re-check agreed.

Face-value demand (Ahrefs GB, 12-month averages)

Term	Vol/mo	KD	CPC	Note
headphone ear pads	70	1	$0.15	The GB face value looks tiny replacement ear pads	40	0	$0.20	The demand sits at model level, not here
US structural evidence	n/a	n/a	n/a	The number 1 US page has a traffic potential of roughly 3,000 visits/mo across model terms (US 'headphone ear pads': 250/mo, TP 2,900)
Model long tail (sony wh-1000xm4 / bose qc35 / etc.)	10 to 20 each GB, hundreds of models	0	up to $2.00	Every headphone model needs new pads every 1 to 2 years

The long tail

One commodity product (memory-foam pads) multiplied by every headphone model gives the same catalogue maths as putter weights. Pads wear out on a 12-to-24-month cycle, so there is a genuine repeat element. The low order value (£12 to £20) caps the ceiling, which is why this is a side bet rather than a headline recommendation.

Competition (live Google UK unless noted)

Who	What they are	Weakness
Wicked Cushions (US)	The category's global specialist, ranking number 1 in GB	No UK stock or dispatch, returns friction, no UK brand warmth
Amazon / eBay / AliExpress churn	Commodity listings	Fitment anxiety unaddressed and quality inconsistent. A fit guarantee converts against this.
Headset Store, Lindy	UK generalists	Accessory sidelines rather than model-matrix specialists

Market sizing. Assumptions are shown so they can be challenged.

Layer	Estimate	Basis
Addressable GB searches	est. 1,500 to 3,000/mo across the model tail	Scaled from US structure (GB runs at 30% to 40% of US volumes across this cluster)
Visits at dominance	600 to 1,200/mo	35% to 40% capture with top-3 rankings across the tail
Revenue	£400 to £1,600/mo	3% to 5% conversion at £14 to £18 average order. Modest, but the capital and operations are near zero.

The ceiling is capped by order value and by Wicked Cushions' brand. There is also strategic value: the supplier base and operations transfer to any future catalogue site.

Risks, and what would make us walk away

Wicked Cushions launching UK fulfilment would compress the window, and Amazon habit is strong for commodity repurchases. Walk away if test SKUs cannot reach a 40% landed margin, or if the model pages cannot reach the top 3 within six months.

Next step

If pursued: start with the 30 best-selling models (Sony, Bose, Beats, Sennheiser), lead with a fit guarantee and UK next-day dispatch, and cap stock exposure at £2k to £3k.

The graveyard: what we killed, with the evidence

This page exists so nobody re-treads these. Each angle was killed by a live Google UK page-1 check (August 2026) or by a decisive demand finding.

Angle	Killer evidence (live page 1)
Garage door spares	Ten spares-branded sites: P C Henderson (OEM), Sparesmaster, WS, UK/Online/Northwest Garage Door Spares, garagedoor-spares.com, an eBay store and more
Greenhouse spares	greenhousespares.co.uk ('The Specialist stockist') at number 1, plus Halls OEM spares, Two Wests, Elloughton, Alton and Simply Garden Spares
V-belts & taper-lock (bearings/PT)	Bearing Boys, George Lodge, TransDev, Simply Bearings, Acorn, Medway PT, Bearing Station, Bearings R Us
Horse arena mirrors	Six specialists (made2measure, mirrors4riding, arenamirrors.com, equestrianreflections, arenamirrorsplus, simplyarenamirrors) for 150 searches a month
Cricket covers & ground equipment	3D Sports, total-play, Durant, ACS, Matchsaver, Stuart Canvas, Net World Sports
Made-to-measure netting	Henry Cows, Huck Nets, nets4you, Net World custom, Cocus, safetynet365, W M James
Changing room benches	Commercial Washrooms, AJ Products, Slingsby, BiGDUG, Simply Lockers, Venesta, Continental Sports
Padel canopies/courts	Eight installers (Fordingbridge, Padeltech, Portico, Rocklyn, Kit Buildings, SG Padel, Aloteks, A&S;)
Hot tub covers (MTM)	Happy Hot Tubs custom, coversfortubs.co.uk, The Cover Guy, Canadian Spa, plus dealer custom offers
Garden furniture cushions (MTM)	foam4u, Direct Foam, Outdoor Cushion Co., outdoor-cushion.co.uk, with Amazon at number 1
Sofa/furniture legs	Heritage Components, Heico Direct, plus Amazon, IKEA, eBay and hairpin.com
Toilet seat hinges	Choice Replacement Toilet Seat Shop, Toolstation, Croydex (OEM), Plumbers-Mate, Wickes, Amazon
Blind spare parts	blindspares.co.uk, blindspartsdirect.co.uk and blindparts.co.uk, plus Blinds By Post and Direct Order Blinds. Joe's live check agrees.
Derailleur hangers	rearmechhanger.com holds positions 1 and 2, with Halfords beneath
Stove glass/rope/bricks	stoveglassreplacement.co.uk, UK Glass Centre, Fast Glass Direct, Stove Supermarket, Glowing Embers and others
Static caravan spares	Demand of ~800/mo fragmented across 50 micro-terms, with head terms already at KD 38 to 39
Commercial gym equipment spares	The keyword pull showed the demand is for machine purchases. Real spares searches total ~270/mo.
uPVC hardware / pizza-oven accessories / mobility batteries / AGA spares / van racking	Sheds and giants (Screwfix, Amazon), brand-direct sales (Ooni/Gozney), battery chains, established AGA-spares sellers, and Bri-Stor/Van Guard

Data honesty note

Ahrefs volumes contained AI-generated keyword families that inflate niches: 'cricket pitch protection covers {city}' appears ten times over (about 850/mo of phantom demand), alongside giveaways like 'custom brass gym flooring' and 'equestrian menage covers near me'. We stripped these before sizing anything. Raw keyword exports elsewhere will overstate several of these markets.

The repeatable edge: the mis-served SERP scan

The pattern that reliably found opportunity: search for a product a business would buy, and watch what Google returns. If it substitutes a different product, demand exists and supply does not. 'Gym mats with logo' returns doormats. Before golfweights launched, 'golf club weights' returned information pages. That substitution was the clearest opportunity signal in the whole project.

How to run it as a production line:

1. List quote-led products that businesses currently buy through sales reps, trade counters or brochure sites (the Calda Morley shape). Anything customised, printed, cut to size or model-fitted is a candidate.
2. Live-search three to five buyer phrasings for each. Count the dedicated specialists on page 1 (zero makes it a candidate) and note whether Google substitutes a different product (substitution makes it a strong candidate).
3. Only then pull keyword data, face value and long tail, stripping synthetic families. Size the market top-down from the buyer universe and bottom-up from search.
4. Supplier before site. A candidate is only real once a supplier, printer or fabricator quotes a landed cost that leaves at least a 40% margin.

Recommended sequence from here

When	Action	Cost
Week 1	Hot tub filters: re-confirm the live SERP, get three supplier quotes, build the filter-code cross-reference dataset	A few days of effort; no capital
Weeks 1 to 2	Branded matting: map suppliers and printers, build one landing page, run a 20-club outreach test	A few days of effort; test spend under £500
Week 2	Caravan hardware: the two-day validation pass, ending in a promote-or-bury decision	About 5,000 Ahrefs units
Ongoing	Run the mis-served SERP scan monthly as an agency habit. Revisit robot-mower blades and padel consumables each spring.	An hour a month

Method and data appendix

Sources: Ahrefs API (keyword volumes, difficulty, CPC and traffic potential for GB and US; figures are 12-month averages, which hide seasonality), SERPAPI live Google UK results (August 2026), site metrics for the calibration benchmarks, and live site inspections. Spend: about 22,000 Ahrefs API units across three rounds, roughly 5% of the monthly workspace budget. Companion file: Niche-Product-Longlist.xlsx in the same repository holds the full scorecard, 160+ keyword rows and per-check evidence. Key caveats: the installed-base figures (hot tubs, gyms, caravans) are industry estimates rather than audited numbers; the lifebuoysdirect revenue figure is anecdotal; and the revenue models are ranges built on stated assumptions, which are the part to challenge. All CPCs are shown in USD as reported by Ahrefs.
